VII 次の文は、隆史 (Takashi) がカナダでホームステイした時のことについて書いたものです。

英文を読み、以下の問いに答えなさい。

I don't talk too much. I'm a little shy. In Japan, my family and friends know ①this, so it's OK. I stayed in Canada for two weeks last year. I could understand a lot of things that people said — I was so happy! But I had trouble with my shyness. My host family talked a lot — a lot more than my family at home. When I arrived in Vancouver, my host family met me at the airport. I was nervous. I didn't know what to say. But they asked me lots of questions — “How was your flight?” (“Good.”) “Did you enjoy the food on the plane?” (“Yes.”) “Did you see a movie during the flight?” (“Yes.”) “How long did it take?” (“Nine hours.”) And so on. I could answer all of the questions, which was good, but there were so many.

A few days later, my host father asked me, “Takashi, are you OK?” I was surprised! Why was he asking me that? I said, “Yes, I'm fine, thanks.” He said, “Are you sure? You're so quiet! We're a little worried about you. Are you having a good time?” I said, “Yes, I am! I'm having a great time. I'm just shy. Don't worry about me!” After that, ②I tried to talk more. I asked my host family more questions, too. Questions like “Were you busy at work today?” and “How was your soccer game? Did you win?” I realized there are some things that are easy to talk about, like the weather. You can always start a conversation by saying “It was really hot today, wasn't it?”
